“Speaking of China” Lecture:

China and the U.S.: Can’t We Just Get Along?

Andrew Nathan
Columbia University
Andrew J. Nathan is Class of 1919 Professor of Political Science at Columbia University. His teaching and research interests include Chinese politics and foreign policy, the comparative study of political participation and political culture, and human rights. He is engaged in long-term research and writing on Chinese foreign policy and on sources of political legitimacy in Asia, the latter research based on data from the Asian Barometer Survey, a multi-national collaborative survey research project active in eighteen countries in Asia.

Abstract:
With a stubbornly persisting trade war, growing military tensions in the South China Sea, and contrast views on how the world should be organized, U.S.—China relations are steadily worsening. How sharp is the clash between the two countries’ strategic ambitions? Is it possible to stabilize relations to avoid the worst-case outcome? Professor Andrew Nathan will share his observation on some of the latest developments in the complicated US-China relationship and its longer-term trajectories.

Details:
Thursday, November 7, 2019
4:30 - 6:00pm
Teleconference Room (4th floor)
Alexander Library
169 College Avenue
New Brunswick, NJ 08901

Co-Sponsor
Department of Political Science